

HWA meets Margaret Thatcher, Prince of Wales, King Hussein

By Aaron Dean

PASADENA — The Work's G-II jet touched down at the Burbank, Calif., airport July 23 at 5:04 p.m. Pacific Daylight Time (PDT), carrying Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong on the last leg of an international trip that included meetings with Jordan's King Hussein, Charles, Prince of Wales, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Nagendra Singh, a judge of the International Court of Justice at The Hague, Netherlands.

The trip began three weeks previously with Mr. Armstrong, the G-II crew and Fred Stevens, manager of the Work's Accounting Department, departing the Burbank airport July 3 at 10:30 a.m. PDT for Orr, Minn.

We arrived at the Orr airport at 3 p.m., Central Daylight Time, and were driven to the Summer Educational Program (SEP) campus outside Orr for a 3:30 p.m. Church service.

There, Mr. Armstrong delivered a powerful and encouraging sermon to a record group of 703 campers, staff and Church members (W/N, "Record SEP Group Hears Pastor General at Orr Camp," July 19).

After his sermon, the pastor general had dinner with ministers serving as SEP section directors and their wives.

Sunday morning began for Mr. Armstrong and his party with a working brunch for the Ambassador College students serving on the SEP staff.

After the brunch Mr. Armstrong was driven back to the Orr airport, where we departed for London, England. Joining us on the G-II was Joseph Locke, principal of Imperial Schools in Pasadena, and business manager for the Orr SEP.

Mr. Locke has a masters degree in special education for the mentally retarded, and Mr. Armstrong felt he could assist in evaluating the Ambassador Foundation's joint project assisting a school for the mentally retarded in Amman, Jordan.

The G-II landed at Luton airport in England at 30 minutes past midnight, local time, July 5. Twelve hours later Mr. Armstrong met with evangelist Frank Brown, regional director for God's Work in Great Britain, the Middle East and East and West Africa. They discussed Mr. Armstrong's planned office visit to the Work's regional office in Borehamwood, England, scheduled after his return from Jordan.

Tuesday, Mr. Locke met Andrew Silcox, a local elder serving in England. Mr. Silcox is transferring to Pasadena later this fall to teach at Imperial Schools here.

Aaron Dean, a local elder, serves as Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong's personal aide. Evangelist Dibar Aparian, regional director of the Work in French-speaking areas, Marilyn Kneller, wife of Paris, France, pastor Sam Kneller, and Fred Stevens, manager of the Work's Accounting Department, also contributed to this account.

July 7, Mr. Armstrong and his group boarded the G-II for a 10:02 a.m. departure for Amman.

Jordan meetings

Mr. Armstrong was met at the Amman airport by Khawla Abu-Odeh, wife of Adnan Abu-Odeh, the Jordanian minister of information, and Ghusoon Karah, principal of the Bunyat Special Education Center that is partially supported by the Ambassador Foundation.

The women brought greetings from other government ministers and officials attending a special memorial service for King Hussein's grandfather.

The next morning Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Locke, Mr. Stevens and I met in Mr. Armstrong's hotel suite at 10:30 with Mrs. Abu-Odeh; Khadeejah Seraj, secretary to Princess Sarvath; Radaah Khatieb, dean of the Princess Sarvath Community College for Women; and Mrs. Karah. We discussed how the foundation could best help the center.

After the meeting the women escorted Mr. Locke on a tour of the center, which was in summer recess. Mr. Locke said he was impressed with the facilities.

Friday we had a free day, as the Islamic faith observes a Friday Sabbath. Mr. Armstrong worked on some articles at his typewriter in his suite at the Amman Marriot Hotel, while the rest of us accompanied crew members from the Work's Media Services Department to Jerash, the site of an ancient Greek and Roman city. The ancient architecture there, we observed, is well preserved in this arid desert climate.

Evening 'breakfast'

After observing the Sabbath with Church members on the G-II staff and television crew, Mr. Armstrong went as an invited guest to a Ramadan evening breakfast, called an iftar in Arabic, at the Amman sports complex.

Ramadan, a month of daytime fasting for Moslems, began June 23 and ended July 23. Moslem tradition holds that the Koran, the Islamic holy book, was written during this time more than 1,300 years ago.

Moslems must refrain from eating, drinking and smoking between sunrise and sunset during this time. We, of course, were not required to participate in this fasting and maintained a normal diet.

The evening "breakfast" was attended by government ministers, business leaders and trustees and board members from the Bunyat Center and the Princess Sarvath Community College for Women.

Mr. Armstrong was seated next to In'am Al Mufti, the Jordanian minister of social development. Mrs. Mufti is the first woman cabinet minister in the 61-year history of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan.

The evening breakfast featured traditional Arab dishes, including humus, pita bread and spiced vegetables, followed by dishes of prepared chicken and stroganoff.

After the dinner Sersa Hekmat, sister of Mohammed Hekmat, Jordan's chief of protocol, rose and proposed a toast to Mr. Armstrong in honor of his efforts to promote peace and understanding among nations.

The pastor general met with King Hussein, Sunday, July 11, in the king's palace. The king remembered Mr. Armstrong from his 1974 meeting and greeted the pastor general as a personal friend.

Their conversation was warm and centered on the problems in the Middle East. When King Hussein expressed his desire for peace in the area, Mr. Armstrong told him that peace would come, but not by human effort.

Knowing the king's busy schedule, Mr. Armstrong purposely kept the meeting short. Waiting to speak with the king was a senior adviser from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, the first official representative from Egypt to Jordan since the signing of the Camp David peace accords between Egypt and Israel.

Shortly after his return to the Marriot Hotel from the royal palace, Mr. Armstrong received a caller who delivered a framed and autographed photograph of King Hussein.

Mr. Armstrong noted that the portrait was taken by Desmond Groves of Harrods in London, the official photographer of Queen Elizabeth and the one who photographed his portrait for the 1981 Ambassador College Envy.

After Mr. Armstrong's meeting with the king, Mr. Locke toured the Princess Sarvath Community College for Women. After discussing the problems and needs of the school with the two men, Mr. Armstrong proposed that the foundation sponsor a teacher to help train their people.

In addition, he proposed that Ambassador College offer classes in teaching the mentally retarded that would prepare Ambassador students to teach in the Bunyat Center.

The Middle East: focus of fateful conflicts

PASADENA — At the two extremities of the Middle East, epic struggles are under way.

In the west, along the shores of the Mediterranean Sea, 6,000 guerrilla terrorists of the Palestine Liberation Organization as well as the PLO's top command are trapped in the western part of Beirut, by the besieging Israeli army.

In the east, full-scale fighting has resumed between Iran and Iraq, this time on Iraqi soil.

Massive PLO stockpile

Israeli troops overran and overwhelmed PLO positions in a lightning drive north through Lebanon, beginning June 6. What surprised Israeli officers most was the enormous amount of weapons the PLO had stockpiled.

Enough PLO weaponry was uncovered in Lebanon, it was said, to equip a 60,000-man army, about four times the 15,000 PLO fighters in Lebanon when the Israelis launched operation "Peace for Galilee."

The Israelis were also surprised by the number of foreign soldiers who were in the employ of the PLO, proving the PLO's formidable links to world terrorism.

Of the 6,000 guerrillas captured, about 400 were from Bangladesh, 60 from Pakistan, 50 from India, as well as unreported numbers from Mauritania, the Sudan, Niger, Mali, Somalia, Turkey, Sri Lanka, Algeria, Syria, Jordan and Iraq.

News slanted against Israel

For their incursion into Lebanon, the Israelis have suffered a bad public image from the news media. Much of the negative response is because of the number of civilians said to have been killed or injured. The figures vary widely and the PLO has greatly exaggerated the casualty totals.

Some accounts (such as "Lebanon Eyewitness" in the Aug. 2, issue of The New Republic) reveal that the Israelis went to great lengths to warn the civilian populations in Tyre, Sidon and elsewhere to flee to safety before attacks were launched on PLO positions.

(The Israeli army observes a strict code of military conduct called tohar haneshkek.)

King Saul followed a similar strategy when, following God's command, he attacked the Amalekites. "And Saul came to the city of Amalek, and lay in wait in the valley. And Saul said to the Kenites [a people friendly to Israel], 'Go, depart, go down from the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them'" (1 Samuel 15:5,6, RSV).

Unlike the Kenites, who departed to safety, not all Lebanese and Palestinian civilians have done so. The PLO often would not permit civilians to leave the battle zone.

Worse still, the PLO has followed a deliberate strategy of placing its troops and gun emplacements in the midst of heavily populated areas — in effect holding civilians hostage.

A favorite tactic of the PLO has been to put anti-aircraft batteries in school yards and to place tanks and other artillery close to hospitals and apartment buildings.

In this manner the PLO hoped that the Israelis would either not fire for fear of causing civilian casualties, or if they did return fire would unintentionally kill and wound civilians, blackening Israel's image in the news media.

Victory may vanish

Israeli leaders are concerned that, with their drive on West Beirut halted by U.S. pressure, they will have yet another clear-cut victory denied them by Washington.

The news media in general haven't reported enough on how many Lebanese, both Moslems and Christians, welcomed the Israeli action and wished that the Israelis could be permitted to finish the job and rid their unfortunate country of the PLO menace once and for all.

This is especially true of the residents of southern Lebanon, where the PLO set up a "state-within-a-state," usurped all authority and held the native Lebanese hostage to their aims.

The record of intimidation and bloodshed caused by the PLO as well as Syrian occupying forces in Lebanon since the so-called civil war in 1975-76 was not explained enough by the press, which generally treated it as an unexciting internal Lebanese matter.

Holy war on the Euphrates

At the eastern extremity of the Middle East the hot wind of war is once again blowing across the desert wastelands at the head of the Persian Gulf. It is not unconnected to the struggle in Lebanon.

After finally ridding their soil of Iraqi invaders who stormed in nearly two years ago, Iranian soldiers and revolutionary guards have mounted a long expected counteroffensive into Iraq, complete with fanatical human-wave attacks. (The Iraqis cleared Iraqi land mines literally by foot — promising those who died in the process that they would instantly attain paradise.)

Just what does Iran's supreme religious and political leader, the Ayatollah Khomeini, have in mind? Abbas Amir, executive director of Iran's Institute for International Affairs from 1973 to 1979, wrote the following for the Los Angeles, Calif., Times, July 18:

"The original border dispute [with Iraq] has been overshadowed

Saudi Arabia and the rest of the gulf. But the Ayatollah Khomeini's vow was even more explosive: to press on to Jerusalem, to liberate the Holy City and overwhelm all enemies of Islam . . .

"If the Palestinians," continues the Time report, "want Jerusalem as the capital of a state of their own, Khomeini wants it as the goal of a holy crusade."

Grave peril to the West

For the moment, the Iranian counteroffensive seems to have been blunted by a spirited Iraqi defense by a much larger goal now being pursued by the Khomeini regime: expansion of the Islamic revolution throughout the gulf and, perhaps, the entire secular Arab world.

"Khomeini and his fundamentalist supporters sincerely believe that most of the present political, educational and economic systems of the Islamic countries are Western institutions imposed upon these states in order to exploit them and to destroy Islam, its vitality and value.

"They are convinced that if pro-Western regimes are replaced by Islamic government (their version) and the West's influence eliminated, Muslim societies, armed with Islamic laws and values, will unite and create a force and a civilization far superior to those of the West and the East.

"And so the Ayatollah Khomeini . . . [is] determined to eliminate the pro-Western governments of the region one by one."

Time magazine featured the Ayatollah (Time spells it Ayatullah) on the cover of its July 26 issue, with a subtitle containing a quote from the Iranian leader: "This is a war between Islam and blasphemy."

The Time account added another dimension to the Iranian drive: "At immediate risk were the moderate, hereditary regimes of coupled with the effect of 120 degrees Fahrenheit (49 degrees Celsius) heat and blinding windstorms. Perhaps God is holding up the Ayatollah's jihad, or holy war.

Observers feel however, that the Ayatollah will not give up until he succeeds in establishing his Islamic fundamentalist, anti-Western new order not only in Iraq but throughout the oil-rich Middle East.

Should he be successful the fate of Western industrial civilization — especially that of Europe — would be at his mercy.

It may not be the Ayatollah (he is 82 years old and in frail health); he may not arise in Iran, whose Shiite Moslems are in the minority in the Middle East. Nevertheless, the Bible clearly prophesies in Daniel 11 that at the time of the end a king of the south shall "push" a king of the north.

This provocation — likely to be a threat to cut Europe's energy lines — will bring European military forces rushing "like a whirlwind" into the Middle East.

Are we witnessing the preconditions to this prophesied one-two punch? Keep your eyes on the Ayatollah's campaign to drive the West out of the Middle East, and the Israelis from Jerusalem.

Just one more thing

Singles tackle problems easier with Christ's help

From time to time we receive requests from single members of God's Church to run more articles directly related to them. If you've already paged through this issue you'll notice we've done just that.

These articles, however, are not just for singles. Many of the principles can be applied in all of our Christian lives, whether single or married.

July 20 the Worldwide News staff and some from other departments in the Work gathered in the Editorial Services conference room to discuss what articles should be written.

Assignments were made and evangelists Joseph Tkach and Dean Blackwell, Richard Rice, director of the Mail Processing Center, and Robin Webber, a minister in the Pasadena Auditorium P.M. congregation, were interviewed.

Their input forms the basis of the articles on singles.

Compiled by singles

Most of the articles were researched and compiled by singles — people familiar with the problems single people face. Men and women who know what it is like to have a hectic day at work, fight the traffic to get home, hurriedly prepare and eat dinner, throw the dirty clothes in the wash, do Bible study and collapse exhausted into bed, to start the cycle over.

The writers are familiar with the feelings of loneliness, rejection and the "nobody-to-talk-to" syndrome.

They are sometimes confronted by concerned relatives or well-meaning Church members who ask: "Hey, when are you going to get married?" or "Have you found the right one yet?" Oftentimes comments such as these strike sore spots.

Christ understands

Christ knows well what it is like to be a single. Singles today don't have any problems He can't understand and help with. He "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Hebrews 4:15).

Remember that we are all part of a spiritual family, the Church (Mark 10:29, 30). The single state is only temporary. Soon we will be married to Christ for all eternity. That is where we need to keep our minds focused.

Our lead article on page 5 begins with a discussion of the singles' situation in the world today. If you think it's difficult being single in the Church, take a look at the singles' situation in the world.

In desperation singles seek out dating services and want-ad magazines. One middle aged man runs filmed advertisements in movie theaters in Southern California begging for a mate. Wholesome, balanced companions are difficult to find.

Singles in God's Church are blessed with singles' activities sponsored by the Church. Sound confidence can be built by taking part in these activities.

A colleague of mine told how embarrassed he was at the Feast one year when someone asked loudly, "Are you going to the singles' dance tonight?" The attitude of being ashamed to go to singles' activities needs to be overcome. Singles' activities are a blessing. Don't sit at home and mope.

Another staff member offered to write an article on the mistakes he'd made with girls, but his idea was rejected because the rest of the staff felt it would take a book to cover all his mistakes. (He's single by choice — by choice of every girl he's dated.)

50-year wait

One article the WN staff particularly enjoyed was the article about Emil Schultz, a member of the Michigan City, Ind., church who waited 50 years to ask the girl he had a crush on in third grade to marry him. If you think you'll never be married, don't give up yet!

Articles on masculinity and femininity are included: important articles in this world of blurred sexual identities.

How many single men have doubted their masculinity after being rejected once or twice? Or a woman who is not popular with a lot of men — does she feel she is lacking some aspect of true womanhood?

These articles can't answer all of the questions, but there are many guidelines helpful to anyone in God's Church, single or married.

Research into the singles scene has been an education for those who have participated in the project. We hope it is of help to the single members of the Church.

Let us know if the articles help. We want your input, your personal experiences in successfully overcoming some of the trials of being single. Take advantage of this and every opportunity to share your life with others.

If the program is implemented, it would operate in a similar fashion as the Ambassador College Educational Project in Thailand (ACEPT). Mr. Armstrong took the matter under consideration.

Before boarding the G-II for London July 12, Mr. Armstrong talked with Mohammed Kamal, general director of Jordanian television. Dr. Kamal asked the pastor general if he had been able to prepare an audition tape of the World Tomorrow telecast.

Mr. Armstrong replied that he hopes to make an audition tape after his return to Pasadena. Jordanian-sponsored television covers not only the nation of Jordan, but can be received by about 90 percent of Israel's population.

Return to London

En route to Luton airport, the G-II flew 80 miles (128 kilometers) north of Beirut, Lebanon. Only two months before an Algerian G-II jet was shot down in Turkish airspace, near our air route. Knowing that it's not always safe up there, we can be thankful for God's protection.

Tuesday, July 14, Mr. Armstrong returned to the offices in Borehamwood from his suite in the London Dorchester Hotel. Mr. Brown conducted a presentation of the Work in Great Britain.

After the presentation Mr. Armstrong joined the English ministry and Frank Schnee, regional director of the Work in German-speaking areas, for lunch in the Borehamwood Office. Mr. Schnee had flown over from Bonn, West Germany, for the meeting.

After lunch the pastor general addressed the group, explaining the Church's purpose and ministerial responsibilities.

The next day the pastor general met in his Dorchester Hotel suite with Mr. Brown, Mr. Schnee, Plain Truth senior writer and regional editor John R. Schroeder and Francis Bergin, a member of the Church's board of trustees in England.

They discussed Mr. Armstrong's decision to expand the international subscription and newsstand editions of The Plain Truth (WN, "HWA Announces PT Expansion," July 5).

Mr. Armstrong spent the next two days writing a "Personal" for The Plain Truth and the July 16 member and co-worker letter.

Sabbath, July 17, the pastor general boarded the G-II for Paris, France, where he addressed 575 French-speaking brethren from Belgium, France and Switzerland in the Porte de Sevres Sofitel hotel.

Buses brought brethren from Belgium and France, while most of the Geneva, Switzerland, church rode on the 162 mile-per-hour (260 kilometers-per-hour) TGV (Train de Grande Vitesse) that runs between Geneva and Paris.

The pastor general delivered a powerful sermon about the purpose of the Church. Beginning with Adam's wrong choice, he traced the development of man's civilization, revealing the purpose of Christ's first and second comings, and how Church members are training today to later teach the entire world God's way in the Kingdom of God.

"It may be five, it may be 10 years . . ." before Christ's return, he said. "Or it may be more. But we must be prepared and ready. This is the most important thing in your life."

Some of the brethren listened to Mr. Armstrong speak in English, while others listened to a simultaneous translation by minister Olivier Carion into French over wireless lightweight headsets loaned by the German Office.

Evangelist Dibar Apartian, regional director of God's Work in French-speaking areas, arrived in Paris three days earlier from Pasadena to oversee last minute preparations for the pastor general's visit.

The Friday before Mr. Armstrong's sermon, Mr. Apartian conducted a ministerial conference in the Paris Office for French-speaking ministers from Belgium, France and Switzerland.

He updated the ministers on activities of the Work, and presented plans for possible area reorganization to better serve the French-speaking brethren in Europe. Erick Dubois, the minister serving in French-speaking Guadeloupe, also attended the meeting.

The evangelist accompanied the pastor general to Le Bourget airport outside Paris, where Mr. Armstrong and his party flew back to London. Mr. Apartian returned to Pasadena July 20.

After his return to London Mr. Armstrong made an evening international telephone call to the Pasadena Auditorium A.M. congregation. The call came at 10:45 a.m. PDT, and Mr. Armstrong joked that the services were a little behind in Pasadena, since he had already flown to Paris, delivered a sermon and returned. Services were just beginning in Pasadena.

Royal Opera House
Monday, July 19, Mr. Armstrong attended the opening of the new extension to the Royal Opera House in London. After touring the new facilities there, Mr. Armstrong joined about 250 other dignitaries present for an address from Prince Charles.

After the prince's address Mr. Armstrong went to the main foyer for the unveiling of a plaque for the Opera House. There he met and spoke briefly with Prince Charles, (See HUSSEIN, page 12)

Mr. Armstrong concludes SEP on Big Sandy campus with talk

BIG SANDY — The Church's Summer Educational Program (SEP) completed its first session here in 18 years July 27 with an address by Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong, according to Kermit Nelson, director of physical education for the college here and head of the camp program.

This year marked the 20th anniversary of the SEP camps, which began in Big Sandy in 1962, said Kevin Dean, director of Youth Opportunities United (YOU) and overall head of the Church's Summer Educational Programs.

Becky Lerette, a Pasadena Ambassador College sophomore, contributed to this account of the Big Sandy Summer Educational Program (SEP), where she served as a swimming instructor.

Two hundred twenty-nine campers, ranging in age from 14 to 18, began the Big Sandy camp July 1. During their four-week stay campers participated in activities that were physically, mentally and spiritually educational, Mr. Dean said.

"The Big Sandy camp gives older children in the Church an opportunity to further develop their skills," Mr. Dean continued. Dr. Nelson added that more than 80 percent of the Big Sandy campers had attended the SEP at Orr, Minn.

"Mr. Armstrong suggested that an SEP camp be started again at Big Sandy for two reasons," Mr. Dean said. "First, it would be a camp for older kids, providing a higher level of personal development. Secondly, it gives the college faculty there an opportunity to look at prospective students."

"Being on the campus here gives them an insight," Dr. Nelson stated. "I think it helps motivate . . . campers to eventually attend A.C."

Varied activities

The SEP camp made full use of the college facilities here during the four-week session, Dr. Nelson continued. "We strived for a well-rounded program."

Richard Ames, an associate professor of theology and speech and director of admissions for Pasadena Ambassador College, was head of the education program here.

Sixteen Big Sandy faculty members and 43 students from the Pasadena and Big Sandy campuses were counselors and instructors for the summer program. Twenty-seven high school age workers served as assistants.

Golf, swimming, aerobic dance, tennis, racquetball, cycling, basketball, volleyball and softball were among the many activities featured during the SEP.

Mr. Ames conducted a principles of living class for the campers, who lived in the campus Booth City in five groups. In the principles class, campers were encouraged to set personal goals, following the outline given in Mr. Armstrong's booklet The Seven Laws of Success.

Campers also read and discussed the booklet, The Wonderful World Tomorrow — What It Will Be Like.

"There was a lot of input from the students," Dr. Nelson said. "Mr. Ames encouraged the campers to relate their school and work experiences, and to apply what they learn here. He emphasized that living God's way is a 24-hour-a-day occupation."

Speech skills

Campers also improved their speaking skills in a television and video class.

"We utilized the television camera and recorder here to record the campers speaking in different situations," Dr. Nelson said. "After recording them we would play the tape back and the group would discuss their presentation."

Included in the video class were sections in which the campers underwent mock job interviews.

"Faculty members would conduct the interviews, then conclude at the end with a request for the prospective employee to work the following Friday evening. The camper then had to tactfully respond in a manner not to lose his new job, but at the same time, successfully manage to keep the Sabbath."

Another section enabled some campers to prepare school-related presentations that would help them keep up with schoolwork while attending the Church's Holy Day services.

Dr. Nelson said he hoped that "all of them got some ideas through their presentations and discussions that they can store . . . for later use."

"Campers attended regular services and the weekly Bible study with the Big Sandy church. They also provided special music for the churches in Longview and Tyler [Tex.]," Dr. Nelson said.

Social opportunities were also plentiful. Cookouts, a watermelon party, Bible bowls, sing-alongs and two semiformal dances took place during the camp.

"We feel this year was a success," Mr. Dean said. "The campers were the pioneers of a brand new program, which we will be evaluating and improving should Mr. Armstrong decide to go ahead with a 1983 camp at Big Sandy."

Ambassador student dies

PASADENA — Scott E. Higgins, 23, a Pasadena Ambassador College sophomore, was accidentally electrocuted July 1 while working near high-voltage wires at the Church's Summer Educational Program (SEP) in Orr, Minn., according to evangelist Raymond F. McNair, deputy chancellor of the college here.

SCOTT E. HIGGINS

A summer maintenance employee, Mr. Higgins accidentally pushed an aluminum scaffold into high tension lines near the SEP gymnasium that carried 14,400 volts, according to an accident report filed by the college Safety and Security Department here.

He was pronounced dead on the scene by a deputy sheriff from the St. Louis County sheriff's department in Minnesota.

Officials at the SEP camp said a campwide memorial service was conducted for Mr. Higgins three days after his death.

Richard Frankel, pastor of the Washington, D.C., church, informed Mr. Higgins' parents, Dr. and Mrs. Robert P. Higgins, who live in suburban Washington, in person, of their son's death, according to Greg Albrecht, dean of students here.

Mr. McNair told The Worldwide News that Mr. Higgins' parents expressed an interest in starting a memorial scholarship in their son's name for students participating in the Jerusalem archaeological excavations. The matter is under discussion, Mr. McNair said.

In a letter to Mr. Higgins' parents, Mr. McNair wrote: "As you well know, it is difficult for me to find the words to express our sentiments at a time like this . . . We want you both to know that we will be remembering you in our thoughts and prayers during this difficult time of bereavement."

"The administration, faculty and students of Ambassador College wish to convey to the two of you our best wishes during this time. Scott will be missed by us all."

Mr. McNair also stated in the letter that a metal plaque with Mr. Higgins' name and picture is being prepared, and will hang in the Frontier Room in Ambassador Hall as a memorial. The Frontier Room serves as an informal meeting place for Pasadena students.

Two sympathy cards, signed by Pasadena students, faculty and members of the Auditorium P.M. congregation, were also sent to the Higginses.

Singles cope, overcome problems as numbers increase worldwide

PASADENA — More people are living alone today than ever before, and the number of singles in the Church has risen to about 25 percent of the entire membership, said Richard Rice, director of the Work's Mail Processing Center.

In January, New York magazine reported that by 1990, "the number of American households composed of unattached people — the never-married, the divorced, the separated and the widowed — will nearly equal the number of households of married people."

The U.S. National Center for Health Statistics reported in March that there were 2.4 million marriages and 1.2 million divorces in the United States last year. There are now 53 million single people in the United States.

Singles are turning to workshops, weekends, matchmakers, newspaper advertisements and computer matchings to be fixed up with members of the opposite sex.

College singles even advertise for temporary sex partners on university bulletin boards.

An advertisement in a singles' newspaper reads: "Dream Girl Wanted, slim blond, 18 to 30, 5 ft. to 5 ft. 4 in., wanted for never-ending love..."

"Young, trim, athletic Playboy, 60, desires a youthful, lively foxy Playmate for life..."

One woman advertised for a prince: "Can't see wasting time dating frogs hoping a prince will emerge... looking for husband to give precious love... very handsome throughout..."

"Warning! I'm lazy, irresponsible, rash, impetuous, restless and selfish... I guarantee you won't be bored."

Singles increasing

In 1970, 10.8 million people were living alone in the United States, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. Ten years later, 17.8 million lived alone.

The number of single men increased 92.3 percent in that 10-year period. Today, 11 million U.S. women live alone, up 50.6 percent from 1970. There are 6.5 million single men.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics says nearly one of every five families with children under 18 is now maintained by a single parent who is divorced, separated, widowed or never married. The ratio was 1 to 9 in 1970.

"Roughly 13 million American children are somebody's stepchildren," House & Garden magazine reported last year.

In 1957, Inner American, a publication of social science research, asked people what they thought about singles. Fifty-three percent said such individuals were probably too neurotic, immoral or selfish to marry.

In 1976, a similar poll revealed only 33 percent thought singles were morally flawed or sick. The survey concluded that today, society tends to be more tolerant of singles — married people accept them more readily than they used to.

What do God's ministers have to say about single people?

Brethren affected

"Married people often don't realize the loneliness that singles experience — their need for companionship," said Joseph Tkach, director of Ministerial Services.

Evangelist Dean Blackwell urges married men in Spokesman Clubs to "take single people under your wing like a younger brother, encourage them and plan activities within your family."

(See SINGLES, page 6)

Singles' Life-style

Living as a single in today's world can be a complex, frustrating existence. To provide positive advice and alternatives for singles in God's Church, the Worldwide News staff interviewed evangelists, pastors and singles from several areas.

The following 3½ pages reflect those interviews, plus extensive review of sermon and Bible study material given by pastors and evangelists in the Pasadena area. The material was mostly compiled by single members.

The articles aren't bylined because they contain the composite advice and thought of several ministers. By no means is the subject of living as a single person either fully exhausted or complete in every respect.

The WN staff hopes this section will give singles and married people food for thought. It is not meant to be the authoritative and absolute standard for Church singles.

Several topics weren't covered for lack of space. If you, as a WN reader, find this section helpful and interesting, let us know.

Avoid 'pressure cooker relationship' Put friendships before romance

Certainly successful dating for men means, among other things, having concern for a girl, being relaxed yet poised and acting sensitive and compassionate.

The "who-can-give-me-a-good-time" approach doesn't go over too well. Being conceited and too self-assured won't work either. Nor will dating just for what you can get out of it.

The first step is to find a date. In God's Church there are many opportunities for social outings.

If you want to succeed, bear this in mind: "Dating need not have the pressure cooker relationship of potential romance every time you have a date," according to Herman

L. Hoeh, Plain Truth senior editor for copy.

He bases his statement on the biblical principle of giving rather than getting, "which is what Mr. [Herbert] Armstrong has emphasized over the years, encouraging us to think of other people whether younger, the same age, older or handicapped."

With that in mind, how do you approach a girl for a date? First, of course, you'll want to be physically groomed and neat.

Instead of asking, "Hey, what are you doing Saturday night?" state what you would like to do and ask the girl if she would like to join you — that you would enjoy her company.

Don't leave her uncertain about anything. Make sure (especially if this is your first date with her) that she knows where the two of you will be going, how long you'll be gone and what she should wear. Don't embarrass her by showing up at her door in a suit, when she is expecting a casual situation and greets you in jeans.

Be a friend

Don't act too serious or beg for companionship. Show her that you want to be a natural friend. Have a positive attitude — don't expect to be turned down, yet don't get offended if you are.

Too often, fellows don't ask out certain women because they wouldn't want to marry them "so why date them?"

Men should have standards for dating, but they forget other vital purposes served by dating: to develop a well-rounded personality, for fun, to expand socially and culturally, to build confidence and overcome self-centeredness.

Examine your attitudes about women. How would you feel if they treated you like you treat them?

Dating girls in your church area is also an important way to serve — if you are doing it for unselfish motives. Remember that group dating is also enjoyable and a good way to make a first date comfortable.

Don't say, "There aren't any women in my area." Take a closer look. There could be several you could date.

Obviously marriage is a potential outcome of dating, but more important is laying a stable, strong and mature foundation before contemplating matrimony.

When you're on a date, remember girls can usually sense a fellow's false motives by (1) his stares, (2) taking her places to "show her off," yet leaving her empty and unfulfilled and (3) seeing him pout when she's not giving him 100 percent attention or responding to his "cry-baby" whims.

Don't get offended if others ask her to dance or want to talk to her. Let her have fun and develop socially, too.

Also, girls detect being sized up as a future wife or rushed into courtship. Don't start out with questions such as: "Do you cook? Do you sew? What do you think about women's lib.?"

On a date

Suppose you are worried about whether she or you will have an enjoyable time. Take heart, if you're capable of focusing your attention on others and entertaining someone else, you're on your way.

With a giving attitude — a concern for your date — you can practice successful dating principles.

You don't have to be overly concerned about how things are going on the date or whether you're making a good impression. When you take dating too seriously, you defeat its purpose altogether.

Just relax and be yourself — don't put on airs. Your date wants to be appreciated, not impressed.

How about conversation? Well, some things not to discuss are your date's personal IQ, her past romances or boyfriends, other girls you've dated, sexual views or family problems. Most girls consider such information private and confidential. And don't ask how much she weighs.

Don't overwhelm her with your knowledge or brilliance, but don't act unsure of yourself or fail to take the initiative, waiting for her to make decisions.

Most girls prefer not having to make any decisions on the first date. They'll feel more secure and appreciative if you have the evening well-planned.

There are few things that will turn off a girl quicker than for you to lack confidence. Don't keep asking her what she wants to do. Make the decisions, but be thoughtful and considerate of her needs and desires.

Macho man

A word about over-confidence. One thing that girls detest is a cocky, over-confident, arrogant man. Some make the mistake of being far too full of self-esteem on dates, thinking they are "God's gift to girls." How shortsighted and foolish! If your dates end badly maybe you're to blame.

A few other things to remember on your date: (1) be positive about life, (2) be masculine, but don't throw your weight around, (3) be gentle and compassionate and (4) don't lead a girl on, then drop her without warning. To become serious with a girl and suddenly stop dating her without warning is one of the cruelest things you can do to her.

You can carry on interesting and intelligent conversations by having read widely, being well-informed and having special interests in hobbies.

Elements of successful dating

Dating: a woman's point of view

Do you find yourself worrying about dates? Will we have a good time? Will I like him? Will he like me?

There are steps you can take to ensure the success of every date.

When someone asks you out, be respectful. If you can't accept, be polite — give a reason when possible. Don't make him feel snubbed. If you'd like to go out with him some other time, let him know.

If you accept, do so enthusiastically. Let him know you are looking forward to the date.

Don't go on a date expecting him to constantly entertain you. Concentrate on getting to know your date, responding to his discussions. Dating should be a two-way, give-and-take process.

Encourage him to talk, and then show sincere interest and concern for him. Nothing will help someone open up more than knowing that a friendly, concerned person is available to listen. This is how you can begin cultivating a friendship.

Conversation with your date can help round out your personality. So you don't know anything about computers or snorkeling — maybe those are his interests and, if he tells you about them, you'll learn something new.

Radiate friendliness and warmth. Be sincerely positive and happy. Men appreciate a bubbly personality (as long as it's not over done). If he asks your opinion on a subject, tell him your views. Let him get to know your personality. Don't answer with an "uh-huh" or "yeah."

Support his suggestions and ideas enthusiastically. Be flexible to fit in with his plans. If he suggests waterskiing and you've never been, take the challenge and try it. However, be honest if it is beyond your capabilities.

As long as his ventures are appropriate and harmless, make a sincere effort to enjoy them. Be uplifting, not criticizing.

If he asks your preference in restaurants or activities, tell him. Don't say "I don't know" or "I don't care."

Develop a variety of interests and round out your personality. This will contribute to more stimulating conversations. Men do not respect or like being with an "air-headed" woman. Keep up on world events and news of the Work. Dates round out your personality and help you become more balanced. Be sincere and open.

When several men are present, defer to your date, give him your attention. Don't flirt with others or pursue your own interests only.

In the main, he is the one you should direct your conversation toward. Don't make the mistake of wishing you were with someone else and giving that someone else more attention than your date.

If your date is less than fun, or is shy and awkward, be patient. It took courage for him to ask you out in the first place, and your friendliness and consideration — your giving — can help him relax.

If your date is outright obnoxious or inconsiderate, don't react in like manner. Cheer up. The date will only last a little longer, only a few hours out of your whole life. You don't have to accept a second date. Few people, however, will not respond to a positive, giving attitude.

Be sincerely appreciative for the date. The man gave of his time, and probably money, to give you a pleasant time. Make sure he knows you appreciate that. An especially good time may warrant a thank-you note or a batch of homemade cookies. This will also encourage future dates!

If you follow these points, you won't have to worry about dates, wondering if "things will turn out right. These points are according to God's way of giving, and they can't fail.

Quite a bit of responsibility has been placed upon men when it comes to successful dating. But even with all a man's thoughtful preparation and planning, dates can still be unenjoyable. Following are some of the things that women do that destroy the most careful plans for a successful date.

Keeping your date waiting. This is a sign of irresponsibility and lack of consideration. If you need extra time to prepare, start earlier. Don't start (and possibly end) a relationship by doing this.

Accepting a date you don't want. Dating offers a chance to give of yourself to another person, to give him a nice time. If you don't enjoy his company or don't think you can give him a nice time, do both of you a favor and kindly refuse.

Remember he thought enough of you to want to spend his time (and probably money) with you. Be warm and thoughtful when you turn him down. Men have feelings too, even though they may not show them as easily.

Stopping him from being nice to you. Men like to protect and provide for women. And dating is no exception.

(See DATING, page 8)

Femininity begins in the mind

In a world where women's lib and the struggle for equal rights have gained prominence, the true definition of femininity has become confused.

The modern woman forsakes the home and makes increasing inroads into what once was thought of as "a man's world." Female truck drivers, politicians, construction workers and executives are no longer uncommon, and just as God prophesied through Isaiah, many women rule over men (Isaiah 3:12).

What is femininity? When God created woman, how did He intend her to be? What qualities do men appreciate and find naturally appealing in a woman? How can a woman become more feminine?

First and foremost, femininity begins in the mind. Whether or not a woman is feminine depends on how she thinks about herself, and consequently how she relates to others.

A feminine woman wants to be a woman. She does not even remotely desire to compete with man. She knows she was created to be man's support and help — and finds happiness in that role.

God made women different from men. They are not as physically strong, have smoother skin, more delicate muscle tone and a softer, higher-toned voice.

Their emotional makeup is also different. Oftentimes they express their emotions more readily, and are more spontaneous in expressing love and joy.

These are some of the differences that make women lovely and attractive to men.

Qualities of femininity are expressed in a woman's whole personality and disposition. While being totally capable, she is responsive, submissive, although intelligent, she can be humble, sincere and unpretentious.

Her movements and mannerisms are refined and gentle. She carries herself with poise and dignity, and dresses modestly and in good taste.

She appreciates men opening doors for her, taking her coat or lifting heavy objects. She realizes giving them the opportunity to serve her causes them to express their own strength and manliness more. She knows not allowing a man to serve can be discouraging to him.

A truly feminine woman, however, is not a helpless, inept weakling. She is a true servant. She is developing all the possible skills she can to rule and serve in God's Kingdom. But in doing so she will not compete with men.

A woman does not have to be married to be feminine. The single woman has many opportunities to be gracious to all she comes in contact with. If she understands and lives the role God intended for her, her femininity will come through spontaneously.

How, then, can a woman develop femininity? Following are three areas to consider.

Relationship with God

The first is a woman's relationship with God. A feminine woman will recognize God's authority in her life, and will be responsive to His will. This responsiveness to God's authority will carry on over into her day-to-day life.

Sarah, Ruth and Hannah are biblical examples of femininity. Each of these women reflected qualities a feminine woman needs to develop.

Sarah is shown in 1 Peter 3:6 as an example of respect and obedience. We are called her daughters if we follow this example.

Ruth displayed faith and trust in God. Boaz found this quality in Ruth attractive (Ruth 2:12).

Hannah's example of prayer and faith is recorded in 1 Samuel 1. Her husband dearly loved her for the attitude she displayed. Even Eli, the priest, was impressed by her humilty, submissiveness, faith and sincerity.

Each of these women valued their God-ordained position and fulfilled it in such a way that when God blessed them with children, they influenced some of the great men in the Bible.

To become more feminine, as God designed women to be, build and maintain a close relationship with God. Seek and respond to the leading of His Holy Spirit. Make it a goal to please and glorify God in every aspect of life.

View of herself

A second area to consider is how a woman views herself. If she has a right attitude and respect for her gender, she will likely be feminine in her approach to others. On the other hand, a deep-seated conflict and uncertainty about her identity will hinder her in expressing her femininity.

Today, the image of a tough, overly ambitious "able-to-compete-in-a-man's-world" female is exalted. She has arrived. But she has also departed from femininity.

The feminine woman, if employed, will be respectful to her boss and the men she interfaces with on the job. Even though these men do not have the same authority as a husband, she will show respect toward the leadership role God has given man in general.

Relationship with others

The third area to consider is a woman's relationship with others. A woman who has a right relationship with God will have a right relationship with those around her.

God's Spirit will radiate from her with genuine love. She will be kind and tenderhearted, hospitable, willing and helpful, a concerned and attentive listener. As an employee she will be an industrious, diligent worker.

The feminine woman will have a wholesome freshness and cleanness that men admire. She will be relaxed and natural, poised and without self-consciousness. Her attitude will reflect giving and thoughtfulness

Don't neglect courtesy as part of Christian life

Etiquette is not just an elaborate set of dos and don'ts to be practiced at formal dinners or other special occasions.

Good etiquette helps us show love and consideration to others all the time. Knowing what is expected of us in various situations gives us confidence and makes others feel comfortable.

Good manners, however, go far beyond specifically defined rules. According to the late Amy Vanderbilt, manners involve being thoughtful toward others and being creative in doing nice things for them. She considered good manners comparable to the trait of character called kindness.

The Bible tells us that love "doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked..." (1 Corinthians 13:5). Unseemly is defined as not acting according to established standards of good form and taste.

We are instructed to "let all things be done decently and in order" (1 Corinthians 14:40). Following appropriate social rules helps produce harmony and peace in our relationships.

Notice what Peter wrote: "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous" (1 Peter 3:8).

toward all. Her mind is on others, not herself.

A woman who puts God first in her life, has a proper respect for her position and keeps a right relationship with others, will reflect femininity.

She'll radiate joy and contentment as a result of fulfilling her responsibilities of giving and serving.

She will have quiet confidence and serenity as she lives the way God intended for her to live. In short, she will thoroughly enjoy being a woman.

Masculinity requires balance

"Want to be a real man?" the advertisement asks, while millions perk up to take notice. The commercial may go on to insinuate that if a male uses a certain product — well, who knows, he might just become a real man, surrounded forever by hundreds of awestruck women.

Just what is a real man? Is masculinity a Stone Age concept? In today's confused, hypocritical world, many have lost sight of true masculinity. An effeminate nature is substituted for sensitivity, and masculine leadership is widely scoffed at — resulting in confusion and turmoil in society.

The term masculinity brings to mind an overbearing, muscled braggart with an ability to appear suave and sophisticated; an arrogant, self-assured tyrant who rules with a desensitized iron hand; a power-monger who must win at all costs.

Real masculinity reflects none of these extremes. What then, is masculinity?

Masculinity — the art of being a man — emanates from the man who is taking on the nature and character of Jesus and of the God Father.

These are high standards. But no less can be expected for both single and married men who aspire to be a part of the God Family.

How can the principles of good etiquette be applied in day-to-day living?

Think about the courtesy you should extend to your roommates by being neat and clean in your apartment, by keeping the noise down when he (or she) is studying, by communicating plans in advance when they affect him (or her) and by holding to your part of financial arrangements.

Be considerate of fellow workers and respectful to your employer.

Be mindful of how you impress others in the way you dress and groom yourself (see Matthew 22:11), in your speech (Colossians 4:6), when entertaining (Romans 12:13, 1 Peter 4:9) and in dealing with those who are older than you (Leviticus 19:32, 1 Timothy 5:1). Even paying your bills on time qualifies as good manners (Romans 13:7).

It is not within the scope of this article to cover every situation. You may wish to get Amy Vanderbilt's book on etiquette or a comparable publication.

Social practices will vary in different parts of the world, but the underlying reason for them fulfill Matthew 7:12: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets."

POLICY ON ANNOUNCEMENTS

From time to time The Worldwide News receives requests to run ads helping readers to contact brethren for various reasons, primarily from single members wishing to contact singles in other areas.

Years ago the WN instituted a "Personal" column and published the names and addresses of persons desiring to contact other brethren. This practice led to complaints from members of receiving unwanted mail and solicitations, some from dissidents.

The WN then went to a code system. It became a time-consuming and costly burden, forcing the addition of extra personnel.

Some time ago the WN ran a survey of Church pastors' feelings about the value of "Personals." They were overwhelmingly in favor of the decision to cancel this section.

Therefore, the "Personal" column is limited to the type of announcements that do not require the addresses of the brethren to be listed.

The WN will run engagement, wedding, birth, anniversary and obituary notices, and announcements of the Church and Work, such as those regarding the Feast of Tabernacles.

How can you recognize a truly masculine man? It's easy. Physical stature is unimportant. A positive, upbeat outlook is the first thing you notice. A masculine man emanates a "can-do" attitude, reflecting the positive determination demonstrated by Christ in the Bible.

If you talk to a truly masculine man, it's evident that his life centers on God and becoming more like Him. Fruits of effective prayer and Bible study are evident.

As you get to know this man you find that he can be summed up in one word: balance. He knows his worth in comparison with God, but he doesn't condemn himself (Romans 8:1).

Instead, he allows God to use and develop what talents he has been given, not coveting or envying those who may have different gifts. He cheerfully refuses to compare or judge his worth by the accomplishments and/or positions of others.

This attitude of balance combined with acceptance of circumstance (Philippians 4:11) forges an inner strength and peace. With God the focus of his life, he has a new kind of self-esteem far beyond the expectations of human psychologists.

Far from being based on human abilities, this new godly self-esteem arises from the knowledge that a Christian "can do all things through Christ" (Philippians 4:13).

This knowledge, coupled with experience and practice, gradually replaces the negative, nonmasculine traits of needless fear, painful inferiority complexes and envy.

On occasion, this man may stumble, but the negative traits that re-emerge are quickly "put to death" (Colossians 3:5, New International Version).

This strong conviction produces a noncompromising attitude. The masculine man can take correction and is not destroyed by criticism. He doesn't bend under stress and pressure. He's firmly grounded in the truth of God and practices it.

He faces challenges straight on — alert to opportunities. This alertness, coupled with the ability to take thought-out, calculated risks, sets him apart. People around him sense a winning attitude of right leadership.

The masculine man earns the respect of the opposite sex. He realizes that women also want to be successful — that they want a solid example to look up to for leadership. It is this masculine leadership coupled with right sensitivity that makes a man attractive to females.

If a woman knows that a man has her best interests at heart — that he considers her needs in every decision — she'll gladly follow him. Positive confidence and concern of this nature inspires the opposite sex.

The masculine man is the master of his body, instead of vice versa. He's careful to get proper rest and exercise. He works out his frustrations instead of bottling them up.

A truly masculine man feels and expresses both joy and pain. He doesn't hide his emotions (John 11:35), but he controls his temper and is skilled in the art of tact, understanding and diplomacy.

Women find these traits attractive. One woman described it this way: "To be a man is a responsibility. It is a position given by God... for a purpose and a function. When a man fills this responsibility, he becomes masculine."

Singles

Singles need homes to go to and someone to spend time with, Mr. Blackwell added.

"In Big Sandy we used to mix singles and young married couples in a club called the Young Adult Group," he continued. "The singles benefited from the married people's personal experiences in courtship, marriage and having a family."

"That way it didn't require male and female dating in order to have an activity or social opportunity."

Dates for singles in some Church areas are limited to only one or two people. Mr. Blackwell, who formerly pastored churches in West Texas, said some churches there were faced with this problem.

"So we sponsored big singles' weekends every six months or so, usually over a three-day weekend," the evangelist recalled. Singles from surrounding churches were invited to participate.

In the singles' activities in Pasadena, Mr. Blackwell points out that God has a reason for calling people in the single state.

"Maybe it's so they can be singular in their devotion to the Work without the responsibility of marriage," he stated. "Some people are balanced and may be better off single than married — we're living in the end days."

Social development

Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong doesn't stress dating just toward marriage — "dating is a social development," said Mr. Blackwell.

"We've had a hard time getting some singles involved in activities because they think of the group as a matchmaking process, emphasizing dating and engagement."

"But in our singles' Bible studies, we avoid focusing on dating, courtship and marriage. We emphasize family, friendship, fellowship and fun — in that order," he continued.

"We take the emphasis off having to be married," said Robin Webber, assistant pastor of the Auditorium P.M. church, where 264 of the 950 members are single.

"We try not to merely offer dances as a solution to singles' needs, but a well-rounded balance of activities," added Mr. Webber. "We try to supply the needs — not necessarily the wants — of singles 18 to 80."

Grade school romance reignites half century after first meeting

Emil Schultz, 63, and Margaret Edwards, 61, members of the Michigan City, Ind., church, were married June 5. The following article is reprinted by permission of the Michigan City News-Dispatch June 10.

By Leo Morris

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. — Emil Schultz waited for 50 years to get married, then almost didn't make it to the wedding.

He first met Margaret Edwards when both attended St. Paul School in Michigan City.

"She was Margaret Menke then, it was about the third or fourth grade. I just liked her looks, had a crush on her from the first time I ever saw her."

He was too bashful to say anything to her, so he went out and bought her the most expensive Valentine he could find.

"She said she couldn't understand why I bought such an expensive card, but I was even too bashful to tell her that."

When they graduated from St. Paul, they went their separate ways, Margaret staying in the city and going to Elston High School, Emil working on the farm out in the county.

"I didn't see her again for 20 years. One of her relatives — a cousin — got married to one of my relatives, and we met at the wedding."

Margaret was married by then, but Emil had stayed single, and hadn't even dated that much. He was too busy on the farm, and too bashful; besides, there was only one person he'd ever considered marrying.

"They didn't meet again after that until 1962.

"I started going to a new church, and one of the first people I met when I walked into the service was Margaret. She was no longer married by then.

"It turned out that she needed a ride to get to church. The person who had been driving her said she couldn't do it anymore. I had a big station wagon then, and there was only me, so I volunteered to do it — there was Margaret and her children and her mother.

"I've been driving her to church ever since, 20 years."

He and Margaret started dating occasionally, mostly going out to dance, and Emil started seeing her often, and helping out Margaret's family. Finally, "about 10 years ago," he at last got over his shyness enough to tell Margaret he'd had a crush on her since grade school. Then, a couple of years ago, Margaret's mother died and Margaret moved to a new house. Emil and she had talked about marriage some, with Margaret not sure whether she wanted to or not.

"Then, after all that time, it all seemed to happen so fast. It was about six months ago, around Thanksgiving. I asked her what she thought about getting married and she said yes."

The wedding was scheduled to take place at their church [Worldwide Church of God] last Saturday [June 5] at 5 p.m.

Before Saturday, Emil and Margaret had the same kind of last-minute snags plaguing most couples before weddings. Margaret couldn't find a wedding dress that fit except in a color she didn't like. Their wedding invitations didn't come on time so they canceled the order and stayed up one night doing their own cards by hand.

Then, on Saturday, Emil went to Margaret's house to pick her up and take her to the church. They were supposed to be there at 2:30 p.m. for a service. Others at the service would stay and see the wedding, then attend the reception at the church later.

"I got to Margaret's house at 1 o'clock, but she wasn't there. A note on the door said she'd be back in an hour, but it was already an hour and a half from the time she wrote on the note. Finally, a neighbor came over and said that her daughter had gotten ill and she'd had to go to the hospital.

"She only lives a few blocks from St. Anthony Hospital, so that's where I went to the emergency room. They asked me what I wanted, and I said I was being married at 5 p.m. and was looking for my bride.

"But they looked in their records and didn't have anybody there by that name. A nurse called Memorial Hospital and found out that's where her daughter was, so I went there; she'd gotten an attack of gastritis the day before. The doctor found out we were getting married and sympathized with us and said they'd keep Margaret's daughter another day.

"By that time, it was after 2:30, and people at the church were starting to worry. They had the place all decorated, but no bride and groom. So I took Margaret home, and she changed into her wedding dress and we finally got to the church."

They got to the church just a little late, to the relief of everyone concerned, and got married. They went to the reception, and then to another reception with relatives at St. Joe Hall. They were a little late for that one, too, and when they arrived "everybody got up and clapped."

After that, they decided, naturally, to go dancing at the Moose lodge.

"Somebody told the band leader we'd just gotten married and he announced it; we stood up and got a tremendous ovation. He played 'Melody of Love' for us and we got up and danced in front of everybody."

Emil and Margaret are on a week's leave right now, he from Weil-McClain and she from Gateway. He's settling into married life, finding it to be "a whole lot better" than he ever thought it would be. He's also found himself, at the age of 62, not just a husband but the father of three and the grandfather of twin 4-year-old boys.

"My son is more excited than me. He's been trying to get us to get married for years — even before we got married, he was calling me dad. Now we're trying to get the grandchildren to call me granddad. They still can't quite understand it yet."

Provides fulfilling relationships

Spiritual family assists singles

God created family relationships to teach us vital principles of love, sharing and mutual respect. But does this mean that you, as a single person, cannot learn these lessons?

Should unmarried people in God's Church feel left out when it comes to the growth opportunities and joys that come in a family relationship? How can you experience these things if you do not have a mate or children?

The truth is that all members of God's Church have many fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and children. This is an important key to happiness in a single person's life.

"Jesus said, 'Truly, I say to you, there is no one who has left house or brothers or sisters or mother or father or children or lands, for my sake and for the gospel, who will not receive a hundredfold now in this time, houses and brothers and sisters and mothers and children and lands . . .'" (Mark 10:29, 30, Revised Standard Version).

Spiritual family

That family is your spiritual family. That family can provide many of the same blessings, joys and learning experiences that a physical family does. In some ways even more so — because spiritual relationships will last forever.

God has called each of us to learn how to function well in a loving, giving, serving team. You have been placed in His "Church family," which is the Family of God in its embryo stage that shall be born into the Kingdom of God.

Each of us has responsibilities — as a brother, sister, mother, father or child. Fulfilling these responsibilities requires some sacrifices, and it requires that we keep our minds and hearts turned outward, toward others. But it is the only way to be truly happy.

Relating to brethren in this way inspires them to respond to you as part of the overall family. One of our Christian duties is to provoke others to this kind of loving action (Hebrews 10:24). Here is how it works.

If you are a young man, treat any young woman in God's Church as a spiritual sister, and she will respond to you as a trusted brother.

Seek ways to serve your sisters in the Church in a clean, wholesome way, with a pure intent, as admonished in 1 Timothy 5:2.

Young men should try to build strong relationships with wise, older men, to grow in maturity. Read Paul's advice to the young evangelist Titus (Titus 2:6-8).

Being in Spokesman Club is a great benefit in gaining from others' experiences as well as developing self-assurance. This will assist in exercising the right kind of leadership in planning interesting, meaningful dates.

If you are a single woman, try whenever possible to deal with unmarried men as spiritual brothers.

Young girls should go to older women (married or single) for advice and guidance. Share your plans and hopes for the future. Listen to their experiences. If marriage is in your future, a wise counselor can help you prepare for it.

Single parents

Be mindful of those who are single parents in your congregation. Theirs is not an easy life. They need encouragement, and their children need friendship and care as much as the parent. Remember, as a part of God's Family, we are looked upon as His children (Romans 8:15-17).

Also, widows and other older people often don't have the contact they need to keep them from being lonely. Those circumstances that appear the least rewarding will render the greatest spiritual blessings. Remember such individuals and arrange activities to include them. Why not a picnic in the park or a concert?

Also there are physical things that some elderly people need help with such as mowing their lawns, shopping or housecleaning, to name a few.

Just as a member of a physical family must love and respect the other members of that family through giving and sharing of their time and resources, we must all do the same as part of the great spiritual family, the Body of Christ — God's Church.

In many ways a single person has an advantage in this over those who are married. The unmarried person, unencumbered by physical family ties, often has more time to devote to serving and giving to the spiritual family.

Put to use these happiness-producing principles of living as a family member now. As you give to others in this way you will receive in return (Acts 20:35, Luke 6:38).

God doesn't want you to wait until you become married or until you are finally born into God's Family to learn these valuable lessons.

Learn them now by living like a brother, sister, mother, father or child of others in your "Church family" and you will be preparing for birth into God's Family at Christ's Second Coming.

Obstacles become growth opportunities

Resolve frustrations with faith

Lacking a mate or a complete physical family is a potential source of frustration for singles.

If you don't have a wife, husband, children or a family in God's Church, you can find yourself with some problems, trials and struggles that those who are married or have relatives in the Church may not have.

However, any such frustrations — with roommates, sexual desires or fitting in with Church families — can be overcome.

Paul's example

The apostle Paul learned to overcome many problems as a single man, and so did Jesus Christ in the flesh. It was Christ's power dwelling in Paul that enabled him to defeat his frustrations, including any that arose because of his single condition.

Whether married or not the key to overcoming is to trust Christ.

Paul said: "I know how to live humbly; I also know how to live in prosperity. I have been initiated into the secret for all sorts and conditions of life, for plenty and for hunger, for prosperity and for privations. In Him who strengthens me I am able for anything" (Philippians 4:12-13, Moffatt).

He also said, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content" (Philippians 4:11, King James Version).

It took a lifetime for Paul to learn to be content. He learned that Christ would supply all his needs, not necessarily his wants. Remember, he wanted the thorn in his flesh removed, but God allowed it to remain for Paul's growth.

Paul put his whole heart into doing God's Work — into seeking God's Kingdom first. He learned to have absolute confidence he could live through any situation this life could give. We must do the same to be content with our lot in life.

Our part

Those who find this same contentment are the ones who are growing in God's way of life. They learn to be God-willed, not self-willed — to say to God, "Not my will but yours be done."

They actively study God's Word to find out His will and are aware that God is training and educating them in the best way possible for His Kingdom.

They seek to serve and not be served. They have learned to see obstacles as opportunities for growth.

And they ask God to make them ready, to help them achieve the character they will need to live in God's Family forever.

Results

And as a result of this process — daily repentance, active obedience and total reliance on the power and direction of God's Holy Spirit in their lives — they learn that God will supply all they need to become just like Him.

They learn to have the contentment and satisfaction of knowing that in whatever condition they are in they can live the way that will result in their ultimate happiness.

God says through Paul, "Godliness with contentment is great gain." Whether single or not, make your aim godliness and you will find contentment and peace of mind.

"Hopefully, we are supplying the springboard for people to come together, become acquainted, fellowship and develop friendships."

Pen pals?

Though some brethren may want to correspond with each other in a pen pals section of The Worldwide News, Mr. Blackwell said he thinks it's risky to establish a serious relationship with someone mostly on the basis of writing.

"You can really be misled by the way someone writes," he said. "The biblical purpose of a betrothal or engagement is that people have to be where they can see each other on a regular basis."

Mr. Blackwell noted that the biggest pitfall for a single is getting infatuated with someone in the world.

"Those who work in the world can easily get swept off their feet by a nonbeliever," he said.

"We've tried to emphasize the power that could exist in the Church if all the singles were real spiritual dynamos — it would sure strengthen the Church. Singles need to relate closely with their minister."

"God gives guidelines for dating," said Mr. Tkach. He urges singles to seek out areas of social, mental, emotional, physical and academic compatibility with each other.

"Girls have a hard time relating to men lacking in leadership," Mr. Blackwell commented. "It's like Mr. Armstrong said on the Last Great Day last year: men need more masculinity."

Mr. Rice added that young men often date the most beautiful and most glamorous girls. "Guys may not come off as confident, secure and a leader around this type of girl," said Mr. Rice.

"They should date girls with whom they are compatible and feel comfortable," he added. "I've heard young men say, 'I'll never date an ugly girl.' But that's pretty selfish."

Maybe you don't have a problem finding a date, but certain dates leave you wondering. "What's the matter with me?" Mr. Rice suggests that perhaps you're obsessed with getting married.

"If you're always praying primarily for a mate, maybe you're putting too much emphasis on it and not really waiting for God to provide."

"When you don't ask God in a balanced way, you develop anxiety. Then you tend to exaggerate your feelings and make wrong decisions because you're so intensively set on marriage."

In his counselings with dozens of single people, Mr. Rice finds many single women feel hemmed in and pressured by a dating partner. "Many girls say 'he's pushing me too fast,'" the minister said.

Young men can come on so strong and domineering, he noted, that girls feel that marriage will rob them of their independence, femininity and personality.

Mr. Rice has found that men often claim that girls are not responsive and appreciative.

Mr. Tkach noted that some women have been forced to develop a more aggressive nature instead of a meek and quiet spirit. "But a meek spirit doesn't mean clammings up," said Mr. Tkach.

Mr. Rice admonishes girls to be agreeable and lively, even tactfully suggesting ideas for future dating activities.

"The key," said Mr. Rice, "is building a friendship before a courtship."

Dating

Don't walk too fast for him to open a door or to pull out a chair for you.

Putting on airs. Just be yourself. Let him get to know you, not what you think he wants you to be.

If, however, you find men are turned off by your loudness, seriousness or sense of humor, take this as a suggestion to change.

Making yourself the center of conversation. This shows a lack of maturity. Let him lead the conversation.

When spiritual subjects come up contribute to the discussion. Men admire women whose lives are centered on God and serving others.

Getting upset if things go wrong. Show how much you're in control of your life. Men want to date mature, level-headed women, not emotion-wracked little girls who can't handle problems.

Talking about other men or an especially good date you've had. Don't compare him to others or talk about someone else who makes more money than he does. (Unless you don't want to go out with him again.)

Men like to have relaxing and enjoyable times on dates and not have to worry or compete. If that happens he would rather date another girl.

Putting him down in front of others. Be open and honest if there are problems, but be considerate to discuss them in private.

Talking about him behind his back. If there's something you don't like, keep it to yourself. Badmouthing him is a reflection of your lack of character. This attitude might cause you to lose the respect of men and women.

Dragging him off to meet your friends. Let him take the lead. Be willing to meet his friends or people he would like to meet.

Showing him off to other girls like a door prize. He'll feel like he's being used.

Dating guidelines are simple. Treat your date as you would like to be treated.

Romance

bies, music, sports and art. As your date progresses, talk about her interests, travel experiences, lessons learned, your job and experiences, world news, the Bible, sermons, books or movies.

Really listen and pay respect while your date talks. You probably know people who seem to ask questions mechanically and not even listen to the answers. If you're really listening to what she is saying, you'll be able to find out a lot about her personality by how she says what she says.

Maintain good eye contact. Don't stare at others when they pass by. It'll show you aren't really interested in what she's saying.

Successful dating is a matter of being natural, spontaneous, lively, maintaining high standards of conduct and showing loyalty and conviction toward God.

Girls appreciate guys who show respect for authority, are self-disciplined and are considerate and thoughtful of the elderly, babies, the handicapped, poor people and pets.

After the date, a follow-up phone call or note can mean a lot to a girl. Point out a few things that made your date enjoyable—it goes a long way in building goodwill and her feelings of self-worth.

took part in volleyball, softball and football. Children participated in three-legged races, sack races and a softball game. Favorite activity of the day was watermelon eating, while guitarists Philip Ward and John Howard provided listening music. Ron Savoy.

The NEWCASTLE, Australia, church had a YOU fund-raising activity June 13 and learned about members' spare-time interests. Hobby items displayed included basket weaving, coin collections, leather crafts, electronics, riffery and video games. "Best tables" awards went to Ailsa MacDonald, for her restored and dressed dolls and her cloth painting; and to Lexie Hicks, for her rifles and awards earned for shooting skills.

Winner of the men's cooking contest was Michael Augustus, for his filled capisicums. Food contest entries, along with other donated items, were then auctioned. Biscuits and scones, made by YOU members, were sold to accompany afternoon tea and coffee. Mr. and Mrs. Merv Bell helped organize the activity. Rebecca Kay.

A picnic at Wollaton Park took place July 4 for the NOTTINGHAM, England, church as brethren said goodbye to Pasquale Ferrara, his wife Maria and their sons, Matthio and Andrew, who are moving to Calgary, Alta. Deacon Arthur Cliff, who prepared beefburgers for the group, was assisted by Dorothy Elliott, Jane Gale, Pauline SALTER and Sheila Preston who tossed pancakes, and by Jean McLaren, Eileen Thompson and Marlene Cliff who provided tea and coffee. The children of all ages played ball games, and in a balloon-painting contest Fiona McLaren was the winner, with Sally Whites second and Dorothy Elliott third. Concluding the event, the Ferraras served drinks to the group, and minister Bob Devine proposed the farewell toast.

On the Sabbath, July 3, assistant pastor Ed Smith presented the Ferrara family with an album containing photographs of the four Midlands churches' ministers, as well as the Nottingham church families. Ron McLaren.

A square dance graduation took place June 20 for the ORLANDO, Fla., church's square dance club, the Royal Squares. The graduation of 16 club members concluded weekly classes begun in November, 1981, during which time Carol Massey and Mary Strickland provided baby-sitting services. Club director and caller Ted Kersey, along with guests from another local club, awarded prizes and diplomas. After a skit by guest club members, dancing took place. The gold and blue Royal

At a June 27 barbecue picnic, Orlando brethren feasted on 300 pounds of beef ribs and chicken, together with other food. Softball, volleyball and horseshoes were played, and some picnickers swam in the park's lake. Excitement was added when the group was able to view overhead the space shuttle Columbia immediately after its Florida launch. Ed Strickland.

Chain saws buzzed at a money-making PALMER, Alaska, church effort June 27 at Point McKenzie, when several families cut 13 cords of wood during a nine-hour workday. After the men operated the chain saws, women and children carried the logs to an automatic log splitter, rented for the occasion. Then the split and stacked wood was loaded onto trucks and trailers, to be sold by YOU members. Linda Orchard.

Evangelist Dean Blackwell of Pasadena was guest speaker June 26 in PARIS, Tex., at the organization of a new local church. Denison, Tex. (Texoma), pastor Gerald Witte will lead weekly Sabbath services at Paris, beginning July 31. Iva Parkhill.

A noisy and "fowl" money-making project took place June 17, 22 and 24 for 60 brethren of the PASCO, Wash., church. Volunteers, aged 12 to 60, removed about 20,000 chickens each night from egg-laying cages and loaded them into cages on semitrailers destined for a West Coast soup cannery. Member Kelly Gangnath procured the contract with a local egg farm. About 1½ tons of chickens were transferred altogether, the work done in four-hour shifts in temperatures more than 90 degrees Fahrenheit. The $1,800 earned will be used to send an offering to the Work, pay travel expenses for several YOU members attending the SEP and provide a July 4 camp-out for the church. The hard work was eased somewhat by the making of humorous slogans, such as "We have met the enemy and they are chicken(s)!" Dennis R. Leap.

A hayride by starlight began the PEORIA, Ill., church camp-out June 26 and 27 at Timberline Farms in Goodfield, Ill. Later, the group had a bonfire sing-along and impromptu entertainment.

Early Sunday morning, avid fishermen began trying for the fishing contest prizes. Before lunch, volleyball, softball, horseshoes and other organized games were played. In the afternoon, a creative hat contest was won by Lisa Denton and Corey Hart. YES division; D'Ann Timberlake and Mike Ackley, YOU division; and Jack Radebaugh and Brenda Hanshaw, adult division. Ice cream cones became the final treat of the weekend. Janice Keefer.

The PRESCOTT, Ariz., church had its annual picnic June 20 at sunny Willow Creek Park in Prescott. Softball games were played before a break was taken for food and fellowship in the shade. Later, horseshoe tournaments, volleyball, children's games, more softball and a water balloon fight took place, after which watermelons, provided by the church, were eaten. Wendy Keller.

Families of the RED DEER and WETASKIWIN, Alta., churches camped out June 25 to 27 on the farm of deacon Earl St. Denis. On the Sabbath, services took place at the Millet School, and a Saturday evening Bible study around the camp fire took the format of questions and answers. Pastor Will Wooster was assisted by visiting Calgary, Alta., associate pastor Alan Redmond.

Sunday's activities included baseball and volleyball, as well as a merry-go-round and treasure hunt for the children. Concluding the weekend event was a meal of barbecued lamb and beef, baked potatoes, salads and desserts. Jeanette Engblom.

The year-end banquet for the combined ROCKFORD, Ill., and WISCONSIN DELLS, Wis., Spokesman Clubs took place June 5 at Feldman's Supper Club in Sun Prairie, Wis. After the meeting a plaque was presented to pastor Mitchell Knapp in appreciation of his service to the Rockford and Wisconsin Delles churches before being transferred July 1 to Kansas City, Mo. A dance concluded the evening. John Torgerson.

An evening of dance and entertainment occurred June 19 for ROCKHAMPTON, Australia, brethren who participated in disco, waltz, limbo, hokey pokey and other dances. A half hour of entertainment provided by members included musical recitations on recorders, piano, accordion, brass instruments and Neville Hendricks on bagpipes; several sketches; a song by the Benson family; and a poetry recital by minister John DeMey. During dinner the film of the Pasadena Ambassador College campus tour was featured. Dancing resumed after dinner, and film cartoons were viewed by the children and others. Katherine Jones.

June 27 the ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., church had a pool party and hot dog cookout at the Walter Fuller Recreational Center. The facility featured an Olympic-sized pool. Lavene L. Vorel.

John Daugherty's sermonette recalled the first service in June, 1973, when 66 people attended, 36 of whom were adults and 30 were children. The roster now shows 100 baptized members and 74 others attending. At the first service Al Kersha gave the sermonette, the sermon, the closing prayer and led songs. Mr. Kersha, attending the Pasadena Ministerial Refreshing Program, was present July 10 as guest of honor and gave the anniversary sermon. Mr. Kersha is the Miami, Fla., pastor.

About 50 SANTA ROSA and FAIRFIELD brethren went June 27 to the rescue of Darrell Watkins, his wife Sharon and their three sons, whose new home, which took 1½ years to build, was nearly destroyed by fire. appeared as the cook who served "rattlesnake soup" to the king, pastor Alan Dean, for which she nearly lost her head. During the banquet those who antagonized the king were ordered confined to the stocks. Court jester Chris Miller was threatened by guards and knights when some of his jokes fell flat. At the end the white knight was vanquished by the black knight, D'Arcy Watson, who then had to fence with the queen, Rosemary Dean, wife of the pastor. Ten canoes, each manned by an adult and child, set off at midday, while a powered catamaran followed with personal camping and cooking gear. Campsites were set up each night on the riverbanks, and camp fires provided warmth against the chill, encouraging sing-alongs, jokes and tall tales. Each morning's breakfast was porridge and sausages, and lunch was gorp, consisting mainly of peanuts, sultanas and dried fruits. The high point of the trip was dinner, which was cooked each evening by Barry Johnstone and was served with a cup of hot milo or billy tea.

More than 250 UNION and BRICK TOWN, N.J., brethren attended a picnic June 13 at Schooley's Mountain Park, despite low temperatures and rain. The children played kickball and formed a kite-towing relay team. Undaunted fishermen Art Lewis and Bill Dutton took the dry, main pavilion, where Stan Olen's crew tackled up protective sheets of plastic. The potluck lunch featured barbecued hamburgers and hot dogs. Later, brethren played cards, chess and other table games; communicated, by Ron Robinson's ham radio set, with Texas and New Mexico brethren; and took part in a sing-along, accompanied by Al Lucadano on guitar. Mr. Robinson, dressed as a clown, presented balloons to the children, and those aged 10 and younger also received gifts.

A surprise 35th wedding anniversary party, honoring pastor Jim Jenkins and his wife June, was the picnic's high point. Gifts presented to Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins included a hand-painted ceramic soup pot and a setting of gold plated silverware. A member-sunged congratulations card showed likenesses of the Jenkinses, drawn by Donna Nicolaisen. An anniversary cake, baked and decorated by Sandy Leas, capped off the celebration. Charity function draws 1,100 for Thai benefit PASADENA — More than 1,100 attended a charity performance of Thai classical and traditional dance in the Ambassador Auditorium July 25, according to evangelist Ellis LaRavia, vice president of the Ambassador Foundation.

The event was cosponsored by the foundation and the Rattanakosin Bicentennial Committee of Wat Thai (Thai Temple) of Los Angeles, Calif.

Proceeds from the 2½-hour performance and buffet dinner that followed went to the founding of a vocational school for the financially disadvantaged in Bangkok, Thailand. The performance was part of Thailand's Rattanakosin Bicentennial, the 200th anniversary of the founding of both Bangkok (Krung Rattanakosin in Thai) and the Royal House of Chakri, whose descendants have reigned over the Kingdom of Thailand for two centuries.

King Bhumibol Adulyadej, Thailand's king, is part of this dynasty. Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong first met the king in 1971, and renewed his friendship Jan. 29 in a meeting at Bhubing Rajanives palace near Chiangmai.

At the bicentennial committee's request, Mr. Armstrong delivered an address. After welcoming the group he mentioned that he had viewed a similar classical dance exhibition during his January visit to Thailand.

"I'm very happy," he continued, "to have the privilege of participating in the 200th anniversary . . . of the present dynasty of King Bhumibol."

After Mr. Armstrong's address, Consul General Pradeep Sochiratna of Thailand praised Ambassador College for its involvement in the Laotian refugee program.

He thanked Mr. Armstrong for his involvement in the performance, saying that the event marked "a great day for the Thai community" in Los Angeles.

Consul General Sochiratna then presented Mr. Armstrong with a plaque of appreciation, saying, "To see, to meet Mr. Armstrong, is to love him — to listen to him is to respect him. Mr. Armstrong is a man of experience . . . who has dedicated his life to a higher cause."

After the Thai performance most of the patrons — two thirds of them Thai — walked to the campus student center for a catered meal of beef curry and other traditional Thai dishes.

A dance band played until 11 p.m.

Abbot PhraThepsopon, an official of Wat Thai who has encouraged the founding of the vocational school, expressed his appreciation for the evening's success, according to evangelist Herman Hoch.

Hussein

On Wednesday, July 21, Mr. Armstrong had lunch with Nagedra Singh, a judge sitting on the International Court of Justice in The Hague. Dr. Singh, a longtime acquaintance of Mr. Armstrong, was named to another nine-year term at the world court.

The prince's secretary called Mr. Armstrong early Tuesday morning, arranging a meeting for 9:45 a.m. Thursday. Unfortunately, the explosion of two bombs in Regents Park and Hyde Park Tuesday afternoon forced a change in plans.

The tragedy killed nine British soldiers and injured several bystanders.

The prince planned to attend the military funeral for the dead Thursday morning, and the prince's secretary called to postpone Mr. Armstrong's meeting to 9:30 Friday. Mr. Armstrong already had a scheduled meeting with Prime Minister Thatcher scheduled for 10:15 a.m., so timing would have to be careful.

Late Thursday morning, the prince's secretary called again, requesting another postponement. He explained that the prince was deeply saddened by the funeral. Seven of the men were married, one only four weeks before the tragedy. The secretary mentioned that the prince decided to leave London for awhile, and that all of his appointments were canceled.

Mr. Armstrong hopes to reschedule a meeting for a future trip.

Meeting the prime minister

Friday morning at 10:15 a.m. found Mr. Armstrong inside No. 10 Downing Street, the official residence of the British prime minister. While waiting, one of Mrs. Thatcher's aides came downstairs to greet Mr. Armstrong. He remembered hearing the World Tomorrow broadcast years earlier.

Shortly after this Mr. Armstrong walked up the stairs and joined Mrs. Thatcher in the White Room.

There the pastor general had a 30-minute meeting with Mrs. Thatcher, whom he found to be a cordial hostess. Sir Robert Armstrong, secretary to the British cabinet, was also in attendance.

Mr. Armstrong presented a gift of Steuben crystal entitled "Duolith" to Mrs. Thatcher, which she gratefully received. Mr. Armstrong mentioned that he had now met all four of this world's women prime ministers. Mrs. Thatcher named them all after some thought.

They are the late Golda Meir, former prime minister of Israel; Indira Gandhi, prime minister of India; and Sirimavo Bandaranaike, the former prime minister of Sri Lanka (called Ceylon at the time of Mr. Armstrong's visit).

Mrs. Thatcher had met with King Hussein July 22, and Mr. Armstrong and the prime minister discussed their visits and the situation in Lebanon.

From No. 10 Downing Street, Mr. Armstrong and his party went directly to Luton airport, where they boarded the G-II for Pasadena.

We landed safely in Burbank without incident about 12 hours later. Despite jet lag Mr. Armstrong spoke to more than 1,300 brethren in the Ambassador Auditorium and Pasadena area the following afternoon.

158 attend conferences for Canadian ministry

POINT CLAIRE, Que. — Colin Adair, regional director for English-speaking churches in Canada, concluded the last of three two-day ministerial conferences across Canada here July 14.

"The purpose of the conferences was to get together with . . . the ministry and cover points of administration and teachings so everyone would be more unified in getting God's Work accomplished," Mr. Adair said.

He added that the conferences gave him an opportunity to become better acquainted with the Canadian field ministry, and for the ministers to understand regional office operations.

George Patrickson, a pastor-ranked minister and assistant to Mr. Adair, accompanied the regional director to the conferences. He spoke on office procedures, the Plain Truth newsstand program, and the ministerial fleet operation, Mr. Adair said.

The first conference was conducted May 24 and 25 at the Sheraton Center in Regina, Sask. Thirty-five ministers and wives from churches in Saskatchewan and Manitoba attended.

Mr. Adair said the group enjoyed a barbecue and social evening in a park, later sampling homemade ice cream.

Mr. Adair conducted the second conference at the Holiday Inn in Vernon, B.C., for 47 ministers and wives from British Columbia and Alberta.

Don Mears was raised in rank to preaching elder. Mr. Mears pastors the Kettle Falls, Wash., and Castlegar, B.C., churches.

The third and largest conference was conducted by Mr. Adair July 13 and 14 for 76 English-speaking ministers and wives serving brethren in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

At the end of the first day Malcolm Tofts, a ministerial trainee in Quebec City and Magog, Que., and Dan Thepsopon, a ministerial trainee in the St. John, N.B., church, were ordained local elders.

After the ordinations the ministers and wives enjoyed a social evening on the shores of the St. Lawrence River, Mr. Adair said.

PASADENA — More than 20,000 subscribers were added to the Plain Truth list in Australia in the first six months of this year, an increase of 303 percent.

The newsstand program brought in 8,891 new subscribers, up 202 percent. Responses to The World Tomorrow on television are up 80 percent.

Regional director Peter Nathan spoke at Sabbath services in Fiji and Tonga in June. One person was baptized in Fiji bringing the membership total to 40.

Germany

The summer program continues for seven Ambassador College students working in the Bonn, West Germany, Office, studying German and experiencing life and environment in German-speaking Europe (W/N, "Students Meet President, West German Officials," July 5).

The students visited the Zurich,

Switzerland, church June 3 to 6. June 18 to 21 they traveled with minister Paul Kieffer to fellowship with the East German brethren. They drove to West Berlin and Hannover before returning to Bonn.

Subscriptions to Klar & Wahr, the German-language Plain Truth, reached 102,000, up 92 percent over the same time last year. A total of 52,000 were added since January, and 7,800 requested a language other than German. Mail is up 76 percent.
